Monthly comment

After a strong start to the year, the markets were somewhat disappointed in February. The Bloomberg World Index lost -3% for the month in USD terms, after a +7% performance in January. Bonds mostly lost value in February amid renewed concerns about high inflation and central bank tightening. Strong economic releases led to a repricing of policy rate expectations of around 0.5% in major developed markets. The US 2-year Treasury yield rose by about 0.75% to 4.9%, while the German 2-year Bund increased from 2.6% to 3.2%. US and European investment grade credit also lost ground, after a strong start to the year. The US dollar took advantage of these concerns to rebound, with the dollar index rising by 2.7% over the month.

The performance of the portfolio went down -1.3% against -1.1% for the composite benchmark, bringing performances since inception at -0.8% and -2.9% respectively. During the month, we benefitted from a positive allocation effect but it wasn't enough to compensate the negative selection effect of the equity pocket. At the beginning of the month, we rose the exposure to Chinese equities to 4.0% which reduced the cash position to 9.8%. Biggest contributors to the performance were the two Macro/CTA funds, Lyxor Epsilon Global Trend Fund and Pimco Trends Managed Futures, whereas the Allianz All China Equity fund was the main detractor.

Macroeconomic conditions around the world remain better than expected but the lagged impact of accumulated monetary tightening could still appear in the months ahead. In this scenario of economic slowdown and continued high inflation, we remain cautious in our allocation, favouring investment grade bonds over equities.
